

CV Elena Keilmann

Co-Founder and General Manager

Elena Keilmann (born 1978) is co-founder and General Manager of Consocium, the professional network of independent management consultants established in January 2016. Before, she worked as strategy consultant at McKinsey & Company, Otto Group and as a freelancer for eleven years. During that time, she focused mainly on clients from the financial services sector as well as the consumer goods industry and trade. At Consocium, she brings in her experience as independent consultant to build a strong community with opportunities for networking and professional development.

Elena Keilmann studied Applied Mathematics at the University of Trier, the State University of St. Petersburg and the University of Queensland.

She lives in Hamburg with her husband and her two sons and enjoys running and dancing. She is also a professional trainer, teaching younger consultants essential problem solving and communication skills.

About Consocium

Consocium is the professional network of independent top management consultants. Founded in January 2016, Consocium brings highly qualified consultants together with clients requiring external support for their projects – flexibly, individually and quickly. To find the right experts for each project, Consocium uses a matching algorithm combined with personal recommendations from the network. Companies of all sizes work with Consocium to staff their projects, including large corporations as well as SMEs and consulting firms. For freelance consultants, Consocium is an effective sales channel and a strong community that facilitates collaboration, support and professional development. Founders and General Managers are the former McKinsey consultant Elena Keilmann and the former Booz & Co consultant Christoph Rammé.
